

Ken Dilger

Ken Dilger was raised in Indiana. He was a high school quarterback and also starred in basketball and baseball.

Dilger attended the University of Illinois where he was redshirted for a year (1990) before becoming a four-year letterman and three-year starter as a tight end. He was named All Big Ten in 1991 by the Big Ten coaches and in 1994 by the coaches and media. He graduated from Illinois with a degree in marketing.

Ken spent his first 7 NFL seasons as a tight end with the Indianapolis Colts (1995-2001) and his last three seasons with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers (2002-2004), winning Super Bowl XXXVII in his first year as a Buccaneer. Throughout his career, Ken accumulated career totals of 356 catches, 4,099 yards and 24 touchdowns.

Ken is a businessman in the real estate industry. He enjoys taking time out to share his success secrets from the sports arena to the world of business with corporate audiences across the country.
