

Roy Firestone

Singer Impressionist Humorist

Critically acclaimed for his work in broadcast journalism, Firestone has won seven Emmy Awards and seven Cable ACE Awards. He has interviewed more than 5,000 people, including nearly every major sports figure. Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist Jim Murray calls Firestone “...the best interviewer I’ve ever seen. That’s not the best interviewer in sports, that’s the best interviewer period.”

Curiosity and passion drive Firestone to interview people beyond the realm of sports and in the world of art, music, politics and popular entertainment. His interview subjects are an eclectic mix including seven-time Tour de France winner Lance Armstrong, former president Richard Nixon, legendary actor James Stewart, jazz great Miles Davis, TV’s Ray Romano, and pop icon Madonna.

Firestone performs his multi-media review before audiences in Las Vegas, at major sporting events, meetings, formal events, and conventions throughout the world. The accomplished singer, impressionist and humorist has shared the bill with notables such as Frank Sinatra, Michael McDonald, Wynonna, Gladys Knight, the Four Tops, and Frankie Valli.

In his home town of Miami Beach, Florida, Firestone began his career as a sports reporter and anchor before moving to Los Angeles as a sports anchor for KCBS-TV (1977-85). He was host of ESPN’s SportsLook (1980-90) and is currently host of Up Close Prime Time. He hosts Mark Cuban’s HDNet Face to Face with Roy Firestone and AOL’s Time Out with Roy Firestone. Firestone currently lives in Los Angeles.
