

Jay Johnstone

A former Major Leaguer, Jay Johnstone played for 20 years with eight different teams. He began his career with the California Angels in 1966 and won the American League Rookie of the Year. He played on eight divisional winning teams and earned four World Series rings.

Known as a prankster, Jay wrote about his escapades on the road in three hilarious books, two of which hit the bestseller list.

Johnstone hosted the "The Lighter Side of Sports" and "Baseball's Funniest Pranks". He was also a radio broadcaster for the New York Yankees and Philadelphia Phillies and a TV broadcaster for FOX.

Jay has narrated several videos, including the award-winning "The Hitters Commandments".

He hosts the Annual Jay Johnstone Charity/Celebrity Golf Tournament which raises money for children's charities. And, he participates in baseball clinics, fantasy camps and charity golf tournaments.

Jay and a partner have formed a company that provide sports, entertainment and political collectibles for charity events.

Jay Travels the country as a speaker. He combines motivation with humor by sharing his hilarious road stories and pranks he pulled on his teammates.
